Shareholder Holly Polglase authored a recent article entitled, “Product Liability: Creating Useful Exhibits at Depositions” published in the October issue of the Primerus network newsletter. In the article, Holly describes critical considerations that help lawyers tell accurate and compelling stories when defending product liability cases. Holly tells us, “Practitioners have a number of tools at their disposal to create useful exhibits during depositions that pinpoint exact details in a manner that is hard for the witness to change or refute later at trial. Making use of those tools and paying attention to the details of what an exhibit shows while it is being made will allow the questioner to create exhibits that not only give the experts the details they need to support their opinions but are also powerful story tellers at trial.” We invite you to read Holly’s article.
